Governor Says Costs of Food, Clothing to Be Increased

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 7 (AP)—Governor Lehman called today for elimination of state functions not vital to the nation's victory program and insisted on lower state taxes for war-burdened citizens. Addressing New York's first wartime legislature in 24 years, the Governor foresaw civilian "sacrifice and grief and hardship aplenty." To lighten the financial load he beseeched the lawmakers to economize and to abandon "all non-essential spending."

"We should eliminate those functions of state government, such as public works, which require the use of needed man-power or materials," he asserted.

"You may expect that this year I shall recommend further tax reduction. By our reducing state taxes, we ease the burden of the Federal taxes necessitated by the war. I am confident you will support both the tax reduction and the economies."

In a grim war atmosphere, heightened by draped and blacked-out windows, senators and assemblymen in the assembly chamber heard Speaker Oswald D. Heck also assert "non-defense appropriations must be kept at a minimum."

"Expenditures for public works, except where absolutely necessary, must be sidetracked in order to keep down the tax burden," Heck said, voicing opinions of other legislative leaders who, even in advance of the session, pledged governmental economy.

While the Republican speaker proclaimed necessity of retaining the two-party system and "of acknowledging the right to criticize constructively," the Democratic governor told legislators he would be "insulting integrity and patriotism by asking you to lay aside partisanship for this session."

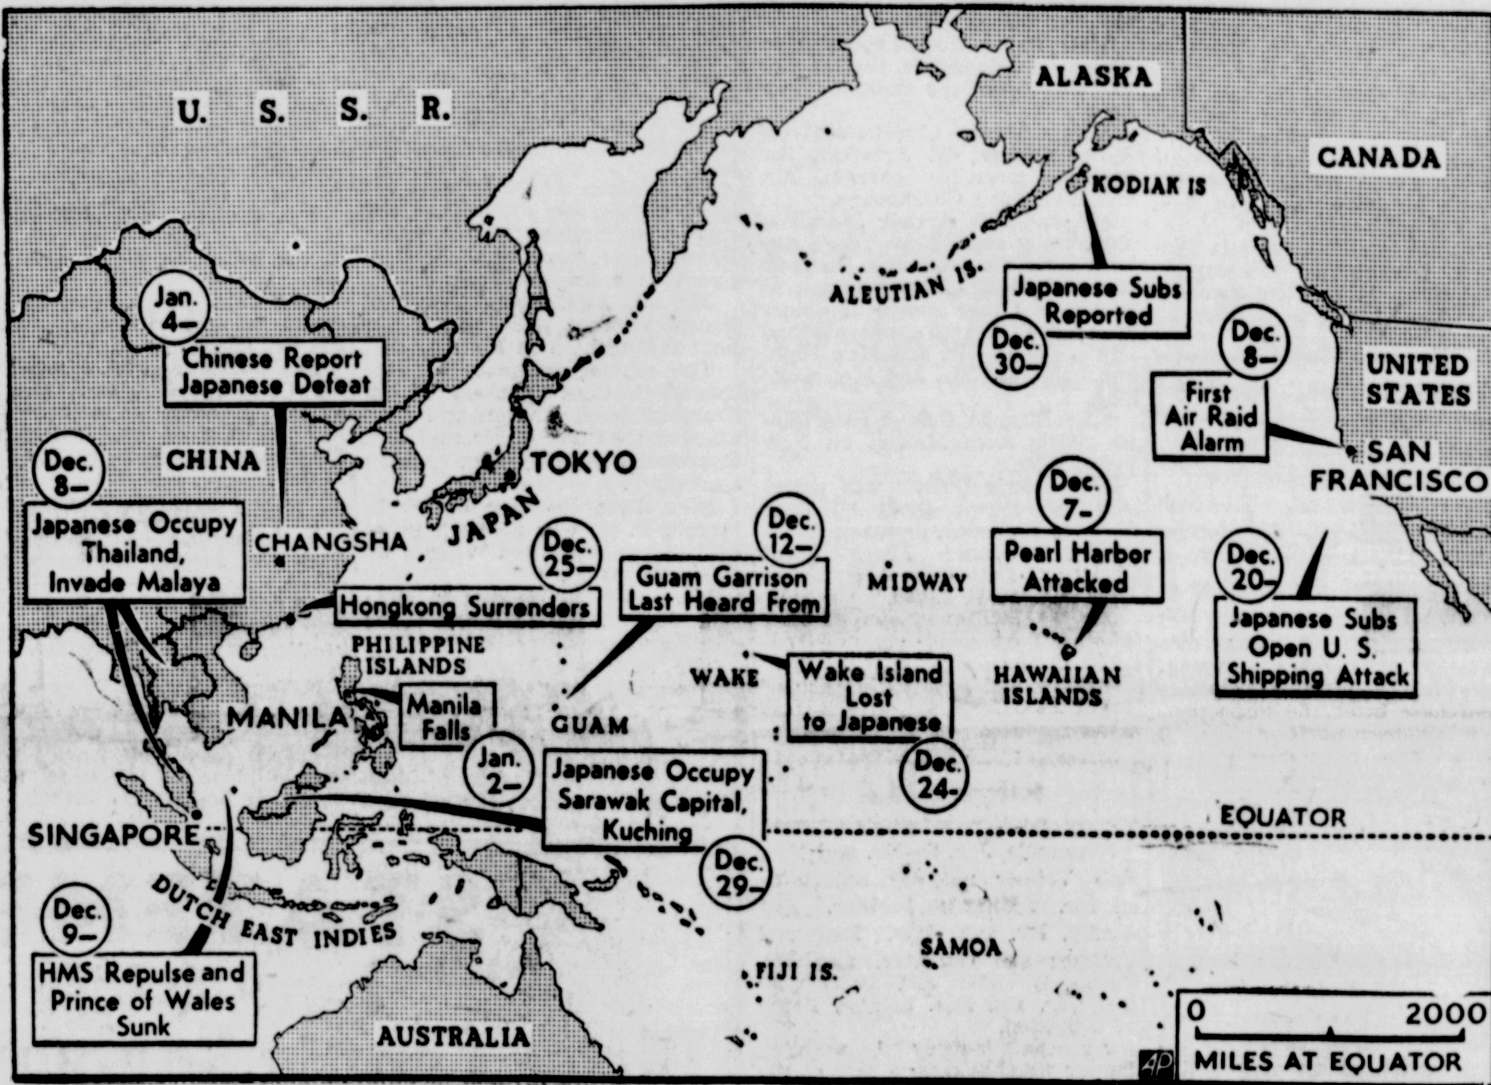

"All of us," Lehman maintained, "will lay aside partisanship and pettiness. In the whole history of this country, freedom has never been a partisan issue."

The governor's message, to be followed within a few days by his social and economic legislative program and within three weeks by his proposed state budget saw inflation as "the most striking economic danger we face today."

"I do not consider inflation as inevitable," he said. "I would regard the failure of congress to enact a price and rent control law as a definite threat to the victory program."

Asks Longer Hours
Lehman advocated lengthening working hours in defense industries to assure maximum output of war materials but at the same time maintaining "a sound, healthy limit on the individual's working time." He pledged labor that "social gains and human values will be respected even while we speed up production."

Common Council Defers Action on 1942 Tax Budget

Committee Asks for Time to Study Changes Made in Tentative Budget; Other Matters

Action on the 1942 tax budget fixing the rate at $43.96 per thousand valuation was deferred to Thursday evening by the Common Council by a vote of eight to four in adopting the report of the finance, ways and means committee that the council recess until then.

The budget which had been prepared by Mayor William F. Edelmuth was filed with the council last night and referred to the finance, ways and means committee, and a recess taken to give the committee an opportunity to look over the budget.

When the council reconvened Alderman Eugene Cornwell, chairman of the committee, said that the budget submitted to them was not the budget submitted to the aldermen at a conference held with Mayor Edelmuth on Monday night. There had been some changes made in the budget presented to the council, he said.

For that reason, Alderman (Continued on Page Seven)

Methods Used in China Are Employed in Islands

(Lloyd Lehrbas covered the Chinese-Japanese war from its beginning in 1937 until he flew across Asia and Africa to be in at the start of the European war at Warsaw in 1939. In those two years he saw at first-hand the "new order" methods Japan used to loot occupied China.)

By LLOYD LEHRBAS
Washington, Jan. 7 (AP)—The Japanese are repeating in the Philippines the looting methods they developed in China—equipping their troops with "carpet bags" literally stuffed with stage money.

From those "carpet bags" in every town and village the Japanese swept through in China came an endless flow of paper money not worth the poor quality paper on which it was printed.

Huge Airships Could Carry Planes Within Striking Distance of Shore Cities

Washington, Jan. 7 (AP)—Responsible military officials said today it is "definitely in the cards" that Germany may use her zeppelins in token raids on east coast cities of the United States.

The Nazis, these sources believe, still have the two dirigibles which bore the swastika at the war's outbreak—the transatlantic veteran, Graf Zeppelin, and the great LZ-130, sister ship of the Hindenburg which was destroyed by fire at Lakehurst, N. J., in 1937.

Either dirigible could be fitted to carry up to ten bombers within easy striking distance of the Atlantic coast and could hover off shore while the planes loosed destruction on the cities, experts here said. Or the zeppelins, themselves, could undertake a suicide mission and do their own bombing.

President Roosevelt, in his message to Congress yesterday, acknowledged that the enemy might try air attacks on great population centers in an attempt at "terrorizing our people" and undermining morale.

In the east, navy aircraft experts noted, the tendency was to think of such a possibility in terms of surface aircraft carriers, but they recalled the well-authenticated report that Germany built a dirigible in the first World War for the express purpose of bombing New York.

This ship was the LZ-70, the largest airship produced by the Reich in that conflict. It had a capacity of 2,500,000 cubic feet, much smaller than either the Graf Zeppelin or the LZ-130, but could have made the transatlantic round trip with ease without refueling.

Germany was beaten before the raid could be made and the ship was destroyed. The Graf Zeppelin, by comparison, is a ship of 4,000,000 cubic (Continued on Page Nine)

Roosevelt Says Hudson Carpenters Helped by Orders

F. D. R. Reports Kingston Firms Among Those Aided by Work on Cabinets

Washington, Jan. 7 (AP)—At least one small industrialist has received government contracts that kept his plant from closing because of war dislocations—but he had some help from the President of the United States.

The Chief Executive related the story of the case at a conference with reporters on his new budget and said it illustrated how the little fellow might be assisted in keeping his workmen employed.

About four months ago, while he was visiting his home at Hyde Park, N. Y., Mr. Roosevelt said a man from nearby Poughkeepsie came to him and said he no longer could get orders and would have to discharge 30 expert carpenters in his woodworking establishment, which specialized on sashes and blinds.

The business had been going on for nearly a hundred years, the President said, with the father and grandfather of the present proprietor running it in earlier days.

Several other similar establishments at Newburgh, Kingston and other places in the Hudson valley also were confronted with the prospect of closing, the Chief Executive learned.

When he returned to Washington, Mr. Roosevelt got to thinking about the problem. Then one day when his nose was being treated he asked Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, his personal physician and the surgeon general of the navy, whether wooden medicine cabinets could not be used by the navy instead of metal and whether wooden desks would not do in place of metal ones.

McIntire thought the wooden products would be satisfactory. The maritime commission informed the President that it could use some wooden wainscoting in ship cabins.

Budget Comparison

Washington, Jan. 7 (AP)—America has had war budgets before, but not anything like today's. Here's how the new one compares with the most costly of other single war years:

Fiscal Year	War	Total U. S. Expenditures
1814	War of 1812	$4,720,926
1847	Mexican War	$7,381,412
1864	Civil War	$1,397,555,224
1899	Spanish-American	$65,072,179
1919	World War I	$18,532,884,765
1942	World War II	$59,027,992,300

(*) Estimated in today's budget.

Washington, Jan. 7 (AP)—Be-speaking the nation's determination to "pay whatever price we must to preserve our way of life," President Roosevelt called today for a war budget of $56,000,000,000 for the next fiscal year $9,000,000,000 of new taxes on top of all existing taxes and unprecedented borrowing that would send the federal debt above $110,000,000,000.

"This is a war budget," he said in his annual budget message to Congress. "Its magnitude and composition depend on events at the battlefronts of the world. x x x Nothing short of a maximum will suffice. I cannot predict ultimate costs because I cannot predict the changing fortunes of war. I can say only that we are determined to pay whatever price we must to preserve our way of life."

He added at a press conference that it was the biggest budget in the history of the world. Government estimates indicated it was nearly double Germany's annual war expenditures. It called, the President said, for a step-up in the rate of war spending from the current $2,000,000,000 a month to $5,000,000,000 a month.

To the United States armed forces and their allies, the President promised that the budget meant "a crushing superiority of equipment."

To the public he said that it meant heavy new taxes because "a fair distribution of the war (Continued on Page Nine)

Rumania, Hungary Call General Mobilization to Check Russians

(By The Associated Press)
Sea-borne Russian troops, striking back into the Crimea at many points, were reported tightening a trap around Adolf Hitler's siege armies at Sevastopol today, while on the central front, retreating Nazi forces were said to have left 10,000 dead on the battlefield and yielded 572 towns in five days.

At the same time, the Germans acknowledged a heavy Soviet push in the Donets river valley of the Ukraine against the industrial city of Kharkov, Russia.

A bulletin from Hitler's field headquarters asserted that Russian troops who landed from barges at Yevpatoriya, on the west Crimean coast 40 miles of Sevastopol, had been wiped out "in brisk house-to-house fighting."

Countering the German version, a London radio broadcast reported that the Russians had established a beachhead, that "heavy fighting is going on along the shore" at Yevpatoriya, and that German forces were moving north from Sevastopol to combat the threat at their rear.

The German high command also asserted that Rumanian soldiers had "smashed" a small Soviet landing party southwest of Feodosiya, in the eastern Crimea, and declared that Nazi dive bombers "effectively attacked other Russian troops landed on the peninsula."

In the Ukraine, Hitler's headquarters admitted that the Soviet counter-offensive had breached German lines northeast of Kharkov, but declared that German troops counter-attacked and succeeded in straightening out the front.

General Mobilization
Meanwhile, diplomatic quarters in Turkey said general mobilization was under way in Rumania and Hungary, with the German trying to muster all possible manpower to check the retreat in Russia.

Soviet informants said Russia expected to drive the invaders behind the Leningrad-Smolensk-Dnieper river line—more than 200 miles west of Moscow—around February 1, "turning the Nazi retreat into a military catastrophe in the bitterest part of the winter."

Advices reaching London said the pace of the Russian counter-sweep was increasing as reinforcements poured steadily into Red army lines.

Japanese Troops Are Already Striking for Indies, London Radio Suggests

Ambon Is Hit

Site of Dutch Base Is Attacked by Tokyo Bombers

(By The Associated Press)
Japan's next goal is the Dutch East Indies.

This appeared evident today from a U. S. War Department communique reporting that the Mikado's sea-borne invasion armies in the Philippines have massed a powerful striking force at Davao Bay, only 600 miles from Dutch Borneo and 400 miles from Dutch Celebes.

A Rome radio report heard in London indicated that the thrust may already have started, declaring that strong forces of Japanese parachute troops had landed on the east coast of Dutch Borneo.

Simultaneously, Dutch East Indies headquarters at Batavia reported that a formation of eight Japanese flying-boats attacked military objectives during the night on the island of Ambon (Amboina), site of a major Dutch naval base, 800 miles south of Davao.

"The enemy dropped 20 bombs and machine-gunned the island," the communique said, reporting that three civilians were killed and four persons wounded.

The bulletin also noted lively aerial reconnaissance over the far-flung archipelago—often the tipping-off of an impending invasion—though the announcement that "enemy planes were observed over various parts of the outer possessions."

Tokyo imperial headquarters said Japanese troops who landed several days ago at Brunei in British North Borneo, adjoining Dutch Borneo, were "extending their field of operations." No details were given.

In smashing at Ambon, the Japanese were seeking to knock out one of the Indies bases from which U. S. Army bombers may have been flying to attack Japanese warships in the Philippines.

For Japan, the Indies with their treasure-trove of such vital war supplies as rubber, tin and oil would be one of the richest prizes in the Far East.

A U. S. war department communique disclosed that Japanese naval units massed in Davao Bay included a battleship five cruisers, six destroyers, 12 submarines and 12 transports—obviously a greater force than would be needed merely to support new landing operations in the Philippines.

Davao, at the southern tip of the Philippines, lies 600 miles below the Manila fighting sector where Gen. Douglas MacArthur's heroic defenders were reported still holding the Japanese at bay on the approaches to Batan Peninsula.

Today's war department bulletin said Gen. MacArthur's troops were withstanding continuous bombing and machine-gunning attacks on their tight front north-west of Manila, with the Japanese increasing their pressure amid heavy fighting.

The bulletin said at least 45 Japanese bombers again raided explosives on the U. S. island Fortresses of Corregidor and on defenses in nearby Batan Province, attacking for several hours.

U. S. anti-aircraft gunners were credited with several hits in peppering the raiders.

Opening of Operations
Washington military observers said Monday's assault by U. S. Army bombers on Japanese warships at Davao probably signalled the opening of a systematic allied bombing campaign to prevent Japan from using Davao as a base for an attack on the Indies.

Further supporting the belief that Japan's war lords planned an attack on the Dutch colonies—possibly as a stepping-stone to Australia—was the report that Gen. (Continued on Page Nine)

You Can't Beat the Dutch at Submarining

(P. Feature)
It was back in 1622 that Cornelius van Drebel, a Dutch scientist in the service of King James I of England, sent his six-oared submarine—the first underwater vessel—churning beneath the surface of the Thames River.

Not until 150 years later was the submarine turned from scientific to war usage, when David Bushnell, an American, designed the "Turtle" in an unsuccessful effort to sink the English warship "Eagle" off New York.

Now 320 years after Drebel, tough Dutch sailors are making history with his invention. When the Nazis invaded Holland, the Dutch submarine fleet consisted of 25 vessels. All made the trip then to the Netherlands East Indies without escort.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)
Thief Sweet, Victim Hot
Hempstead, N. Y.—Philip Levine, a baker, was pretty mad when he opened his warehouse and found that a thief had made off with 20 100-pound bags of sugar. "A ton of sugar—$110 worth and hard to get," Levine moaned with justifiable heat. "How I'd like to catch that man!"

Frozen Dumb
Chicago—Running home in sub-zero cold, Louis Sabatini, 14, slipped on some ice and fell against an iron light pole.

His tongue hit the pole and instantly froze to it, so tightly that he couldn't even free it with the loss of some skin. With the cold wind pouring into his open mouth, he couldn't breathe warm air on the pole to thaw his tongue loose. Policemen, called by Louis' sister, brought hot water and thawed apart the pole and tongue which had been joined 20 minutes.

Freight Car 'Widow' Takes Up Her Husband's Hobby

Mrs. Henry Eighmey Tells How She Aided City's Model Railroad Enthusiasts

(The following article, "Model Railroad Widows," was written by Mrs. Henry Eighmey, of this city, and it appears in the February issue of Railroad Magazine, now on the newsstands.)

By BETTY EIGHMEY

You won't find very many model railroaders of my sex in this or any other country. Fact is, I know of only three: a Philadelphia girl who has turned out some creditable replicas of trolley cars, a talented lady in Massachusetts, and myself. There must be more of us scattered over the United States and Canada and possibly foreign countries. I'd like to get in touch with model railfanettes wherever they are.

I had heard plenty about "model railroad widows"—disconsolate young wives of model enthusiasts—who spent lonely hours because they could not share their husband's hobby. The Saturday Evening Post published a humorous story about one of the some time ago, "Mrs. Union Station." But the situation is not always funny. I remember reading about a Los Angeles woman who divorced her husband largely because he neglected her and devoted too much attention to model railroading.

I don't mean to imply that that Henry P. Eighmey is that extreme. True, my husband is more or less crazy about trains and he's secretary-treasurer of a model railroad club here in Kingston, N. Y., but no comical fiction story has ever been written about him and neither of us is even remotely interested in divorce courts. Before our marriage, while we were keeping steady company, I made no mind to ever be a "model railroad widow." I delved into Henry's avocation and, to my surprise, found it so genuinely entertaining that I adopted it myself. I had long been fascinated by trains, both large and small. Being in love with a modelmaker only strengthened that tendency.

Formal introduction to the hobby came after Henry and some other fellows had founded the Kingston club. The boy friend took me to the club as a visitor, one night. Although I saw only piles of lumber, bits of wire and paper, some rail, and a few completed cars, I realized that this hodgepodge had great possibilities.

The dexterity with which miniature rolling stock was made, complete to minute details, intrigued my curiosity and stirred my admiration. Here was a pastime I liked.

My enthusiasm must have touched a responsive chord in Henry, for shortly afterward he suggested that two could build models as cheaply as one. I readily agreed, and we were married. Our honeymoon was more fun than the conventional fortnight of seclusion to which newlyweds usually retire. We went visiting small railroads all over New England.

We climbed in and out of two-foot-gauge equipment on the Bridgton & Harrison, in Maine—which, alas! recently ceased operation—and we tramped about the weed-grown right-of-way on the abandoned Woodstock line in Vermont. Near Portland we futilely rummaged through a lumber yard looking for traces of a slim-gauge pike. And we inspected model railroad clubs in Boston and Springfield, Mass.; New Haven, Conn.; and Albany, N. Y. When we returned to Kingston our design was primarily to start work on a model layout and secondarily to set up housekeeping at 94 Highland avenue, where we now live.

Henry expects me dutifully to daub paint on the cars as he constructs them and perhaps to add a few decorative touches on the right-of-way. But I had no intention of taking a back seat. I decided women could produce models as well as men.

My first humble task was assembling a Westbrook kit for a Borden refrigerator car. Henry offered to lend his adept hand for difficult parts of the job, but I refused to let him do more than give occasional advice. When the car was completed I took it joyfully to the club rooms and had the boys couple it into a train. And was I thrilled to see my car rolling around the line, smoothly as you please!

The brass hats on the pike of the Kingston Model Railroad Club hadn't taken cognizance of the fact that steam railroads (except for the partly electrified Long Island) earn most of their revenue by wheeling freight. Anyhow, the coaches operating on our club layout far outnumbered the freight cars. Endeavoring to remedy the situation, I built a boxcar, from milled sides and ends. This job was so much simpler than the reefer that, to atone for it, I decided that my next contribution would be a milk car fabricated altogether from scraps. This, modelmakers say, is a real test of ingenuity.

I planned for all the materials to be used with assistance from my husband. The sides, ends, floor and roof I cut from cheesebox wood. The ladders were balsa strips with shortened straight pins for rungs. A section of old lumber was cut to the proper size for the underframe, while a piece of cardboard and narrow strips of the same material formed the roof covering. My sex probably suggested a material for the brakewheel that would not have occurred to a man; I used a large dress snap for the purpose. Then, cutting door hinges from a piece of cardboard and gluing them on, I had the car complete. Now for the decorating. I painted the sides yellow, and the ends, floor and roof red. After that I cut the labels from two evaporated milk cans, pasting one on each side of the car. Lettering on the sides was done with a writing pen dipped in black paint. White ink was used for the ends.

Mrs. Eighmey and some of her O-gauge cars

Naturally, it took me a long time to complete this car, and a lot of tedious effort went into it, but the realization that only the couplers and trucks were bought—in other words, that the car was really my own creation—made me inordinately proud.

My fourth car was another Westbrook reefer kit, given to me as a present by Henry. I suspected his motives in making the gift. I believe he was not thinking as much about my pleasure as of the fun he could soon have in bragging to other fans that his wife had now built four cars.

After my second reefer was in service on the club lines, I got an idea that a string of cars exactly alike makes a fine appearance, so I fashioned two more milk cars to match my third attempt. This gave me a record of six cars, half of them built from odds and ends. Next I overheard a veteran craftsman at the club comment on the difficulty of assembling a certain new stock car that had just been added to the Westbrook line in kit form, so I answered the challenge by completing one of them myself, my seventh piece of rolling stock.

Active participation in the hobby was curtailed for a time because of my eighth model—not a reefer or a milk car, but a baby son, the model of his dad. But as soon as I can I'm going back to railroad modelmaking. I already have ambitious plans for appending a caboose and a gondola, both to be built from scrap materials, to my colorful string of home-made cars.

Housing Survey Will Be Made

Local Evacuation Facilities Will Be Listed in City Beginning Monday

Next Monday a complete housing survey of the City of Kingston will begin. This survey is under the direction of Edward McCaffery, Chairman of Evacuation of the Local Council of National Defense of Kingston. The survey has been ordered by the State Housing Commission. Mrs. Felix Katz is the supervisor of the volunteer enumerators. Her headquarters are in the Civilian Defense Volunteer Office, 247 Clinton avenue.

Under Mrs. Katz's supervision will be many enumerators. The alderman are cooperating with the Civilian Defense Volunteer Office in securing people who will volunteer to help.

The purpose of this survey is to determine the available facilities for the placement of evacuees from the Metropolitan area, in the event a large scale evacuation is needed, or in the event of a major disaster to part of our city, the people could be moved to the undamaged parts.

The survey will help to place evacuees in homes where environmental factors will be similar to those in which they have been residing, thus making for happier and more pleasant situations.

Every family group in the city will be interviewed by the enumerators. The city will be divided into approximately 50 zones, with a captain in charge of each zone.

It is urgently requested that everyone cooperate to the fullest extent with the enumerators so that a complete survey may be completed in a minimum period of time. Everyone can help by answering all questions asked cheerfully and willingly.

Rationing Board To Have Office in County Building

The Ulster County Tire Rationing Board will maintain an office in the County Building on Main street adjacent to the County Clerk's office in one of the offices on the ground floor at the rear of the Motor Vehicle Bureau office. This office will be open during the day and will serve the 20 townships of the county outside the city of Kingston. One of the members of the county board will be in charge of the office.

Chairman Irving Kauder of New Paltz, Carl Eric Lindin of Woodstock and Albert C. Langdon of Highland, members of the county rationing board, will be at the office during the day to receive applications for purchase of tires after the inspection of the tire to be replaced has been made at one of the inspection stations.

This office will serve the people of the county towns in granting orders for purchase of tires. Purchasers residing in the city must make their application to the city rationing office in the city hall.

Full instructions for handling of rubber rationing have been received from the New York State Bureau of Rationing, Albany, which is administering the rationing regulations in this state, outside New York city. Chairman Albert Cashdollar of the Local Defense Council stated today.

Mr. Cashdollar said that as soon as the Tire Rationing Administrator Edgar T. Shultis had completed the survey of motor vehicles in the city and county, the quota of available tires for the city and county would be announced. This quota will be based on the registration of vehicles and the tires to be released for the month of January. The quota for the city and county will be divided between the city board and the county board in the proportion to the number of vehicles registered.

This work of checking registration is already under way at the Motor Vehicle Bureau office where Mr. Shultis has set up a temporary office for that purpose. Once the quota for the city and county is established Mr. Shultis said he would have nothing further to do toward the granting of an order for the purchase of a tire. This must be handled through the rationing board of the city or county depending upon the residence of the applicant.

Those Who Get Tires Mr. Cashdollar stated the regulations issued by the New York State Bureau of Rationing make it clear that the purchase of tires and tubes will be authorized only for vehicles for which there is public necessity and then only after careful investigation of each application. Vehicles for which tires may be authorized after their need is proven are:

Cars of physicians, surgeons, visiting nurses and veterinarians; ambulances; fire and police equipment; public health vehicles, garbage vehicles, mail vehicles; public, school and certain types of workers' buses, if carrying 10 or more persons; trucks carrying ice, fuel, material and equipment for construction of various types, trucks for common carrier; transportation of raw materials, manufactured and semi-manufactured goods; farm tractors or farm implements other than automobiles and trucks.

Chairman Cashdollar said that purchase certificates will not be issued for vehicles which make deliveries of commodities for personal, family or household use. This debars milk and bakery delivery trucks, retail store delivery cars, and similar vehicles.

Members of the tire rationing board have been required to take a federal oath of office and thus are agents of the federal government, he said. All members of the tire rationing board must be members of the Defense Council.

Persons eligible to apply for tires or tubes under the rationing program may obtain application forms at approved tire dealers and garages, which will be designated by the Defense Council. Application forms may also be secured at the office of the tire rationing board, the postoffice, and police stations.

The applicant will then fill out the application and have the tire or tires to be replaced inspected by an approved tire dealer or garage. A report on the condition of the tire will then be made to the tire rationing board by the approved inspector as part of the application.

Such a report will testify as to whether the applicant's tire or tires are unsafe and whether they can be repaired or whether a new tire is necessary. The applicant will then take the application to the tire rationing board. If, in the opinion of the board, after close examination the applicant is approved as falling within an eligible class, the board will issue a certificate to the applicant for the purchase of the tire or tires.

Each county has been given a quota of tires by the Office of Price Administration and this quota for January has been transmitted through the State Bureau of Rationing. Each tire rationing board will be allowed to issue certificates only within its quota. In cases where more applications are received than the quota permits, the Office of Price Administration has ruled that the vehicles deemed most necessary by the local rationing board are to receive preference.

The quotas for each county will be issued on a month-to-month basis and there will be no surplus carried over. It is expected that during any week of any month, a tire rationing board will use up not more than 25 per cent of its quota of tires for that month.

Temperature Hits Zero Mark Again

Ice Is Cause of Accidents But None Are Serious

Zero weather still gripped Kingston last night with thermometers in some sections of Kingston registering zero while at the city hall the official city thermometer from midnight through to 7 o'clock this morning recorded a low of 4 degrees above zero. According to the city hall thermometer the temperature remained steady at 4 degrees during that period.

Tuesday was an exceptionally cold day. The highest temperature recorded that afternoon by the city thermometer was 19 degrees. This was at 1:30 o'clock. From then on it gradually grew much colder.

Ice conditions still prevail throughout the city, and the city's sanding crews are still busy.

The new Snogo purchased by the city in November was being used today in clearing some of the narrow streets off the main thoroughfares.

Due to icy conditions a number of auto collisions were reported to the police department yesterday, but in none of them were personal injuries recorded.

Contract Action Testimony Taken

Question of Light Bill Is Main Issue

The contract action brought by Esther Hack against Agnes Cermak in Supreme Court was continued through Tuesday and again taken up at the opening of court today. The plaintiff seeks to recover damages because she claims the defendant, who owned a property in the town of Esopus, did certain things which caused her to relinquish the boarding house which plaintiff has rented for the summer season from the defendant. As a result of her giving up the premises she claims she lost prospective profits and seeks also to recover the payments made for rental.

Abraham Streifer appears for the plaintiff and Roscoe V. Elsworth for the defendant.

Testimony was offered on behalf of the plaintiff Tuesday to the effect that an agreement had been reached at the time of the hiring of the place whereby the owner was to pay the telephone bill and the usual electric light bill. The plaintiff was to become responsible for any amount in excess of the customary bill. The defendant denied that and claimed that the plaintiff was to pay the bill for electricity and when the bill was not paid the power was shut off. When the power was shut off the plaintiff claims she had no source of water and her boarders left.

It's Easy
Martha Ambler in Your Life magazine, gives the following rules on how to spoil a house party:

1. Introduce your dog as a privileged member of the family and look shocked when some guest ignores him.
2. Wear your best gown after telling your guests to come in "any old thing."
3. Laugh when the guest of honor sits down at the piano.
4. Seat two persons who have been feuding for years side by side at dinner "just to see the fireworks."
5. Insist on everyone joining in a lovely new game called "What swallowed the turnip?"
6. Have the children in to recite pieces and sing ditties.
7. Coax your guests into eating and drinking more than they desire and more than they should, and look hurt when they refuse.
8. Choose this time to start a violent argument with husband and wife.
9. Follow your guests around straightening rugs, mopping up ashes, picking up crumbs, and smoothing dollies.
10. Go off in a corner with one guest for a whispering fest.

Buyer—Is this a good brand of perfume?
Seller—That, madam, is one of our best sellers.

So live that when you die even the undertaker will be sorry.

Guest—Waiter, put this bill right, please. Omelette with two ts.

Waiter—Thanks. That will be another quarter.

Some of these while going through the gloomy years of the depression solemnly took oath with themselves that if ever they had a chance to make money again they would save some of it with an eye to the future and not commit the spending blunders of the lush 1920-29 period. Well, here's their chance. Nobody knows when such another opportunity will come. People are lucky to have a second chance.

Lazy Bones
There's ironin' to be doin'.
An' bakin' and sech like;
But somehow here I'm sittin'
A-rhymin' like with Mike.
There's always heaps of phrases
A-pounding round inside.
Sweeping me 'longwith them
Like the ocean's risin' tide.
Yes, there's work to be a-do'n'.
But, shucks, it's much more fun
To be sittin' here and rhymin'
Till all the work's been done!

"I've just been congratulating Col. Blazie," said a guest at a banquet. "He's been appointed governor of a prison."
"Really?" asked his pretty neighbor. "Now, for a job like that does one need influence, or does one just start as a convict and rise from the ranks?"

A Chinese cook was walking through the woods. He turned around to see a grizzly bear following, smelling of his tracks.
"Hm," said the Chinese, "you like my tracks?" "Velly good, I make some more."

Mrs. P.—I took great pains to make this cucumber salad.
Visitor—I know; I've got 'em.

"Are you a doctor?" queried a four-year-old boy of one who carried an ordinary hand saw. Surely he hadn't heard of "Sawbones."

Mrs. Gray—You told Mrs. Wilson that she didn't look a day older than she did at 18! She looks ten years older!
Hubby—Well, ten years isn't a day, is it?

NO TIME FOR LOVE

By WATKINS E. WRIGHT

YESTERDAY: Lavinia's been kissed, in spite of all she has done to discourage romance. This day she had allowed Freddy to drive her to the Zoo and to the Brooklyn Museum, and to pay him back for long hours of boredom, she agreed to have dinner with him. After dinner, in Freddy's car, Freddy up and kissed her without asking permission—and without apology.

Chapter Six

'Thanks For The Ride'

"THERE!" said Freddy. "That's the sort of thing you read about in books!"

Lavinia jerked back into her corner of the seat.

"Don't you ever do that again!" she raged.

"I make no promises," said Freddy. He released the clutch, and the car started forward.

"With a little practice, Lavinia," he added, "you could become quite a gal—quite a gal!"

Lavinia said nothing. And the drive back to Manhattan was certainly nothing to write home about. Lavinia tried to occupy her mind entirely with unspoken opinions of men in general, and Freddy in particular. And Freddy kept wondering if he wasn't a fool to keep after Lavinia, when that Bessie Marshall, who took Lavinia's dictation, was so easy to impress.

"Don't bother to come to the door with me," Lavinia said, when they reached her apartment house. "And thanks for taking me to the Zoo and the Museum."

"Don't mention it," said Freddy. "Thank you for taking me for a ride." He waited until Lavinia was out of the car, and said: "I hope to heaven some man comes along and makes you suffer like—like I get out."

With this he started the car, and drove off. He didn't bother to say goodbye. Nor did Lavinia.

She went into the house, climbed the stairs to the third floor where the apartment which she and Zoe shared was located, and paused there for a moment.

She frowned. She was still angry over Freddy's silly kiss. But she wondered if she hadn't been too hard on him.

After all, Freddy was Freddy, and there was nothing she could do about it. And maybe if she hadn't planned to make her life a business success, she might even learn to love a man like him. But she had planned her life, and she wasn't going to fall in love. So that was that.

She dug in her bag for the apartment door key, and finally found it. As she inserted it in the lock she thanked her stars that Zoe wasn't at home—that she had planned to have dinner with Peter Raymond.

She was in no mood for questions, and she knew how Zoe would ask them. She would want to know all about what happened—if Freddy had made love to her, if he had suggested marriage, if he had talked about his wife.

Besides, she was tired. Come to think of it, she and Freddy had done a lot of walking. Those long walks in the Park, and the stairs and hard floors in the Museum. It was going to be nice to take a warm bath and get into something comfortable. Then she would go to bed and finish that book about prehistoric animals. She had rented it from a library and didn't want to keep it too long.

She pushed open the door. She stopped stock still in her tracks. A woman was standing in the center of the room smiling at her. "Hello, Lavinia, my dear!" she said.

"Aunt Dorcas!" Lavinia cried. And she ran to the older woman's outstretched arms.

Surprise From Auntie

NEITHER Lavinia nor Miss Dorcas spoke for some moments. They just clung to each other—happily.

"Where's your young man?" Miss Dorcas finally asked.

"Why 'bout that?" said Lavinia, astonished.

"Your young man," Miss Dorcas repeated.

"I haven't got such a thing," said Lavinia.

"But Zoe told me a young man had taken you out to dinner."

"Oh, that!" said Lavinia. "Freddy Ray. I left him down stairs. He's gone on home, I suppose."

She led her aunt to a chair. "Why on earth didn't you let me know you were coming?" she said.

"After all these years—coming unexpectedly like this!"

"I was lucky to get here at all," Miss Dorcas said, "considering the state of affairs on the other side."

She sank down gratefully against the cushions. "Besides, I couldn't tell you when I was coming. I didn't know myself. Good lord, Lavinia, the time I had getting visas, and permits, and arguing with men in a half a dozen different countries! To make matters even worse, the countries were always changing hands. I never knew what language I was supposed to try and speak."

"It must have been awful!" Lavinia said. She dropped down upon a low stool at her aunt's feet. "Just let me look at you, darling! Oh, it's wonderful having you back!"

"And I can tell you it's wonderful being back!" Miss Dorcas burst out. "A cigarette, found it, and lit it. She inhaled deeply, and blew a smoke ring toward the ceiling. "Home! America! I can hardly believe it."

"How did you get here finally?" Lavinia wanted to know.

"Oh, I chased from one country to another, or rather I was chased from one country to another," Miss Dorcas answered. "Always trying to find a boat that was sailing in this direction. But I gave up in the end, and by chance got a Spain. We got as far as Bermuda, and were stopped because of a spy suspect of something." She sighed, and slid down low in the chair. "But early this afternoon I stepped off at LaGuardia Field, got a taxi—and here I am!"

"Thank God," said Lavinia softly. "I'm so sorry I wasn't here to greet you. Oh, your dinner! You must be starved."

"No, Zoe fed me," Miss Dorcas said. She fixed me some eggs, and toast and tea. It's all I wanted. I haven't got back my land stomach yet!" She let her eyes take in each and every one of Lavinia's features. "And what a beauty Zoe's grown up to be!"

"Yes," said Lavinia. "A beautiful girl—throwing herself away on a man. She's being married next Sunday."

"She told me. I'm glad. Her young man sounds very nice."

"You're glad?"

"Yes, my dear. A good husband is just what Zoe needs."

Lavinia shrugged. "Peter's all right," she said, "as men go and come. But let's not talk about men."

"Why not?" said Miss Dorcas. "I like talking about men."

Lavinia laughed somewhat uncertainly. Then she changed the subject. You came back just in time to move in with me," she said. "Since Zoe's moving out."

Beauty Parlor

"WE'LL discuss that later," said Miss Dorcas. "I've already registered at a nearby hotel, and left what little luggage I could get out of that European mess."

"It'll be only temporary," said Lavinia. "You can stay at the hotel for this week only. Then you come here with me. Where did you register—at the Martha Washington?"

"Heavens, no!" Miss Dorcas said, chuckling. "Can you picture me in a hotel for women only?"

She patted Lavinia's cheek. "Never mind answering, my dear. But when I've been to a beauty parlor and had something done to this straight hair of mine, and learn how to apply rouge gracefully, I'll look different."

"You mean you are going to a beauty parlor?" said Lavinia unbelieving.

"I most certainly am," said Miss Dorcas. "From now on I'm going to live like a civilized female."

"But—but—I thought you liked the way you lived."

"I did. But it's time I stopped trudging through jungles and digging in ruins. Maybe it's not the sort of life for a woman, any—anyway." Miss Dorcas blew another smoke ring. "I'm going to try the other way for a time. I can always go back to my trudging and my digging."

Lavinia said nothing. There didn't seem to be anything she could say. She felt a sense of confusion. She had been saving and planning to live her aunt's sort of life, and now her aunt had come back to live the sort of lives a lot of useless, painted women lived. It was beyond her.

Her aunt went on talking. "Thank goodness," she said, "I had sense enough to put money in an annuity, so that I can live without having to skimp too much." She was thoughtful for a moment. "I might even get married."

Then Lavinia did say something. "You—married?" she gasped.

"Yes, my dear," said Aunt Dorcas. "Good heavens, it isn't a complete impossibility, you know. After all, I'm only forty-nine. And this day and time that's considered young for a woman as well as a man."

"I know, Aunt Dorcas," said Lavinia in a dazed sort of way. "But you always seemed to think that marriage was a mistake. —do things—make something of themselves, and now—"

"And now I'm beginning to think I was wrong," Miss Dorcas said.

Lavinia seemed to wilt. Her spine was like rubber. And she had the feeling that this woman who had ever been warm to her Aunt Dorcas at all. She was wearing Aunt Dorcas's kind of clothes, yes—but she had none of the characteristics of her aunt.

"I'm sorry," her aunt said, "that you didn't bring this young Mr. Raymond up. I'd like to meet him."

"He's nothing out of the ordinary. I assure you," said Lavinia somewhat primly. "He's an employee in the store—and he's a widower."

"Widower? sometime 'make the best husband,'" said Miss Dorcas. "Experience, you know. They've learned how to treat a wife."

"I wonder," said Lavinia.

But before they could continue the conversation Zoe arrived. She brought Peter Raymond with her. "Miss Dorcas," she said. "I want you to meet my fiancé. Miss Dorcas, Mr. Raymond. Or, Aunt Dorcas, this is Pete."

"How do you do, Aunt Dorcas," said Peter.

"Hello Pete," said Miss Dorcas. "You lucky devil, you. And you, too, Zoe." She laughed. "Why are you looking at me like that, Pete?"

"Gosh, I don't know, Aunt Dorcas," said Pete. "Only you—well, you don't seem a bit like I expected."

"Oh, I know. You thought I'd be leading a leopard with one hand, and carrying a shotgun in the other."

Cattle Rustler Killed

In true Wild West style, a detachment of gendarmes shot and killed Lino Gonzales, leader of a band of cattle rustlers, and a gendarme was seriously wounded in a running fight near Lomitas, Argentina. A boy reported the cattle theft, and the band was driving 40 stolen cattle toward the Paraguayan border when overtaken. When called to surrender they opened fire. After Gonzales dropped the band aban-boned the cattle and escaped.

Common Council Defers Action on 1942 Tax Budget

Cornwell said, the committee desired a little more time to study the budget before submitting a report. He asked the council to recess to Thursday evening.

Fth Claim Against City

Frederick Richens filed a claim for damages to his umbrella sustained by a fall on Broadway at Andrew street. Mr. Richens wrote that while walking along Broadway at Andrew street he "fell headlong into the street."

When he picked himself up he saw that a large chunk of the curb stone had been broken off, but not by him, and that this had caused his fall. "I did not suffer any injury," he wrote, "but I might have had a different story to tell."

Mr. Richens said that in his fall two ribs in his umbrella had been broken.

The claim was referred to the corporation counsel and auditing committee.

Dam Diverts Water

Harry C. Shultis, through his attorney, Thomas J. Plunkett, filed a claim for damages against the city, but no amount was set forth in the claim. According to the claim made his property in and adjoining a stream known as Lake Brook, near Cooper Lake, which supplies the city with its drinking water, had been damaged by the diversion of water from the brook caused by the water department erecting a dam at Cooper Lake.

Mr. Shultis in his claim stated he would institute a proceeding for an injunction restraining the city from taking and diverting water and to compel the removal of the dam and to permit the water of the creek to flow in the natural course unless the city within one month acquire by grant from the claimant the right to grant to institute condemnation proceedings to acquire the right now exercised.

The claim was referred to the corporation counsel.

To Borrow $75,000

City Treasurer William B. Byrne's request to borrow $75,000 in anticipation of the collection of taxes was granted. This is the usual procedure taken each year at this time.

John Melville, president of the Kingston Civil Service Employees Association, sent in a communication asking the use of the council chamber the third Tuesday of each month in which to hold the monthly association meetings. The request was granted by vote of council.

Parking Regulation

Almerman James E. Connelly introduced a resolution that the traffic code be amended by adding a provision prohibiting the parking of vehicles on the side of the street opposite any driveway entrance in any manner that will interfere with the use of such driveway.

The resolution was referred to the traffic control committee.

Who Moved Traffic Light

Alderman Gilday of the Third ward offered a resolution that the traffic light that had been removed from Broadway and Foxhall avenue be replaced and the present stop signs removed.

President John J. Schwenk called the attention of Alderman Gilday that the traffic light had been removed without authorization of the Common Council and that the traffic code contained a provision that a traffic light be maintained at that street intersection.

President Schwenk said that as far as he could recollect this provision had never been amended by the council. Who moved the traffic light he did not know, and suggested that the aldermen take the matter up with the police department who were empowered to enforce the traffic code provisions.

One Big Factor, Often Deluged by War News, Is Attitude of French People

crippled, but the empire still retains a potential power of tremendous possibilities. There are her colonial and home military bases, her navy, and her spirit of cooperation.

The moral support of France, even in defeat, is a mighty thing. It is vital to the Allies, just as it is essential to Hitler, who is straining every nerve to swing these victims of his military Frankenstein into his camp.

The point is whether we and our Allies are going to adopt an attitude of sympathetic cooperation with the French people and thus help them to avoid being drawn completely into the Nazi chief's power or whether France is to be continually branded as a renegade and thus be driven into the fuhrer's arms. In short, are we to trust the French?

In answering this question we must start from the premise that the pro-Nazi section of the Vichy government and the people of France are not one and the same thing. A lot of people have been inclined to regard them as identical, and drivers of venom have been poured on France as a whole because in the Vichy government are a number of pro-Nazi leaders who are willing to barter their birthright for a nest of evil smelling potage.

The indications are many that the vast majority of the French people are anti-German and pro-ally. And one of the people, or so it seems to me, is old Marshal Petain, chief of state. The signs seem to read that the hero of Verdun is a true representative of his people, whom he is trying to serve as best he can under terrible conditions.

It's all very well to say that he ought to do this and ought to do

3RD AIRBASE SQUADRON: This insignia is reminiscent of the rattlesnake flag of the American revolution with its "Don't Tread On Me" motto. Japanese Loot Philippine Areas

Japanese created a bayonet-pointed inflation, robbed the Chinese of millions of dollars and stripped the country of practically all movable property or produce. By setting up special banks to print more bogus money they sought to wreck the entire Chinese financial structure.

General MacArthur disclosed in communique No. 48 that invading Japanese troops are circulating large quantities of paper money imitating the color and texture of Philippine currency but substituting the Japanese government as the issuing agency.

That's an old story to the Chinese. Every Japanese soldier who shot or clubbed his way onto Chinese territory was paid in special "military script," good only in the cities and towns and countryside he helped conquer. Chinese who refused the spurious currency the first time had it offered to them the next time at the point of a bayonet or a rifle.

Japanese carpet-baggers flocked to China in the wake of the Japanese invading armies with bales of phony money or restricted yen notes. With it they bought all available rice, tin and other vitally needed metals, silk, linen, antiques, cotton, foodstuffs—everything that could be consumed or shipped away to their impoverished little islands—regardless of whether the Chinese or foreign producers, middlemen or agents wanted to sell for scrap paper.

In this method the Japanese army was largely fed and clothed on the countryside it conquered.

reduces the tax rate $1.53 from the rate fixed by the tentative budget that had been filed with him by the outgoing administration.

The new budget also eliminates all bonuses or any increase in salaries except the wages of the laborers.

No provision is made to pay the six new paid firemen that were appointed by the fire board the last week in December.

The Kingston Taxpayers' Association was represented at the meeting of the council last night, but there was no discussion on the new budget which will come up for action on Thursday evening to which time the council recessed.

that in the face of German threats. But when we assert it we ought also to take into consideration that if he does take drastic action against the Nazis, Hitler's reprisals will be awful.

There would seem to be substantiation of the idea that the marshal is playing a decent game in his sudden hardening against further concessions to Germany. This has brought a deluge of vitriolic threats on his head from Nazi and pro-Nazi interests.

In this connection it is highly interesting to see the Washington State Department repudiate the seizure by Free French forces of the French islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, near Newfoundland. That certainly was showing consideration for Petain.

Then there is this point: The pro-Allied sentiment among Frenchmen undoubtedly is much greater since America entered the war. Not to mince words, the French as a whole have no love for the British, and if John Bull loves the French he certainly doesn't wear his heart on his sleeve where it can be seen. I lived for many years in the midst of this feeling of hostility. It's nothing new, for it dates back through the centuries.

But the French people have a deep regard for America. Thus while they might not weep over any British embarrassment, they would desire to give all possible cooperation to the United States. So we must ask ourselves whether we should trust the French people, and that would mean trusting Marshal Petain, though it certainly would not mean that we should trust all those who surround him in office. From the selfish standpoint it likely would be more profitable in the long run.

Gathered or unpressed plaits are optional at either side of the skirt to give it feminine fullness. This is echoed in the softly draped hat with the new down-in-back silhouette. Rayon shantung makes a smart ensemble; try using a vivid contrasting shade for the hat and the belt. Tab pockets and long sleeves are optional.

Pattern 9984 may be ordered only in misses' and women's sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16, dress, requires 3 1/4 yards 39 inch fabric; hat and belt, 1 1/4 yards contrast.

Good Taste Today

By Emily Post

(Author of "Etiquette," "The Personality of a House," "The Book of Social Usage," etc.)

WOULD 7 BRIDE'S ATTENDANTS BE TOO MANY FOR 30 GUESTS?

While reading one of my letters today, ".....maid of honor, six bridesmaids, and then two ushers" the mental picture of a church filled with flowers and packed with guests, suddenly faded. Two ushers with six bridesmaids? And then I read on: "Will seven bride's attendants be too many for fifty wedding guests in a house?"

Frankly the answer is yes. But for no reason except that it would seem a good deal of preparation to ask of your bridesmaids when one bride's attendants could be present. However, if the dresses are very simple—meaning by that, very inexpensive—and if they themselves would like to be bridesmaids, I can see no sensible reason against having them.

I also understand that two ushers would be ample. Under the circumstances I take it for granted that these two ushers will not attempt to lead a procession, but that the bridesmaids will walk up alone followed by your maid of honor.

Sensible Service

Dear Mrs. Post: Here at our house we've been having a heated argument on the best place to put individual plates of salad when they are brought to the table with the main course. We know it's not according to etiquette to serve salad this way, but Mother says that you always stress doing what is most expedient in a particular type of house. Is that right?

Answer: I agree that expedient is something that has to be considered. Considering this then, you could put the salad wherever seems to you most reachable. Personally, I abominate side plates—except at all because they are unsightly, but because I don't know how sleeves are kept out of the main plate. The bread and butter plate makes the food on the plate in front of one hazardous enough without the uncertainties of salads!

The Bride's Mother in Church

Dear Mrs. Post: The mother of the bride is a widow who is much intending to marry again soon after her daughter. She has not announced her engagement, but would like to seat her fiancé next to her in the first pew at her daughter's wedding. If this will be correct, where shall her mother—the bride's grandmother—be seated? She lives with a maiden aunt of the bride.

Answer: I think having her fiancé seated next her in the first pew would be almost the same as announcing her engagement. If they would like people to know, then this will be all right and will, as it were, pave the way for their announcement. The grandmother would be able to have the best view from the aisle seat in the second row—that is, much better than the first row, and the third seat in the first pew. The aunt would also have a perfect view from the second seat.

Mrs. Post is sorry she can no longer answer personal letters.

She is glad however to have many printed slips on a variety of subjects to offer to her readers. To-day's slip is CONVENTIONAL PARTY MENUS. Be sure to send a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Mrs. Post, in care of the Kingston Daily Freeman, P. O. Box 130, Times Square Station, New York, N. Y. Leaflets cannot be mailed unless self-addressed envelope bears correct amount of postage.

Service League Meets

The Service League of the First Presbyterian Church held its first meeting of the new year, Tuesday afternoon, January 6. Mrs. Charles Burgher conducted the devotional service. Mrs. Lewis Law presided and named Mrs. Clara Drake and Mrs. Harford Mullis as nominating committee. They will report at the next meeting. A long letter from Mrs. Claude McIntosh, the retiring president of the North River Presbyterian Society, was read in which she expressed regrets in not being able to continue her work as the Rev. Mr. McIntosh has answered his country's call and the family will be out of the state for a time. The next meeting of the league will be held February 3 when election of officers will take place.

Women to Meet

The Women's Missionary Society of the First Dutch Church will hold its annual all-day sewing meeting at the home of Mrs. A. Noble Graham, Janet street, Wednesday, January 14. Mrs. Harry TenHagen will have charge of the sewing and Mrs. W. Dean Hays will have charge of the luncheon. All women of the church who wish to help with the sewing are invited and are requested to let Mrs. Hays know before Sunday, so she may arrange for the luncheon.

U. S. War Budget Is 56 Billions

burden is necessary for national unity. It also meant, he declared, that the people would have to do with "many conveniences and luxuries" so that the nation may "shift labor, materials and facilities from the production of civilian articles to the production of weapons and other war supplies."

Technically, the budget concerned only money to be paid out of the treasury. However, in setting up the $56,000,000,000 war program, the President said that beside an estimated $52,786,186,000 out of the treasury, he believed that an additional $3,000,000,000 would be spent out of the purses of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and other non-budgetary agencies for war purposes.

Taxes and Borrowing

To pay for this, President Roosevelt estimated there would be $16,457,200,000 of taxes from existing tax laws, asked $7,000,000,000 of new general taxes (not counting increased social security taxes, which do not count as revenues), and proposed borrowing of $33,542,792,000 from social security and other government trust funds and from the public.

In the current fiscal year, he figured, treasury expenses would total $30,675,796,162, including $23,996,525,400 for defense, and calculated that taxes would yield $11,943,993,000, leaving a deficit of $18,731,803,162 to be covered by borrowing.

This meant that the World War spending peak of $18,522,000,000 will be passed this fiscal year and approximately tripled next year.

The President asked Congress for an initial appropriation of $13,600,000,000 to get the huge new war program under way, and said he would ask for additional large amounts as the nation moved toward maximum war production.

In his tax program the President asked for approximately $2,000,000,000 of added social security taxes plus $7,000,000,000 of income, excess profits, estate and gift, and excise taxes. He approved of almost any kind of new taxes except a general sales tax—and he indicated that even that type of levy later might become necessary on a temporary basis.

Saying that taxes were important not only to finance the war but also to prevent inflation, he asserted, "any tax is better than an uncontrolled price rise."

Offers Budget News

The President, however, offered a little bright news to the general public, too.

He said the nation's productive resources were enough in spite of diversions to war output to enable the people to maintain a standard of living more than adequate to support the health and productivity of our people. . . . I do not at present propose general consumer ration cards."

While automobile tires are already rationed, he explained that "there are not as yet scarcities in the necessities of life which make such a step (general rationing) imperative."

Non-military agencies of the government, the President said, will be cut more than $1,000,000,000 in their next year's budgets. He predicted work relief costs would go down from $942,430,000 this fiscal year to $480,075,000 next year; that farm aid would decline from $1,117,082,000 to $854,050,000; that aid to youth costs (C.C.C. and N.Y.A.) would fall from $235,000,000 to $100,000,000, and cited other savings on administrative expenses of other agencies and public works.

Roads not needed for defense, postoffices, and other public works considered non-essential would get no money, he said, unless they were already under construction. He said he hoped Congress would skip its usual blanket road-building grants to states.

U. S. Is Considering Re-Registration Of Foreign Born

Washington, Jan. 7 (AP)—Attorney General Biddle said today that the government was considering a re-registration of the 1,100,000 enemy aliens in this country to provide "tighter control" along the lines followed during the first World War.

Talking at a press conference Biddle said that the idea would be to provide an identification card which every German, Italian and Japanese national in this country would be required to carry. The card would bear the picture of the alien.

The advisability of instituting stricter control was being considered, he said, and he indicated that decision would be made soon.

Under the alien registration program carried out last year, the nearly 5,000,000 non-citizens who registered were given cards bearing a single fingerprint to show that they had complied with the law, but they are not required to carry these cards on their persons.

Under the new program being considered such cards would be carried at all times and would simplify, Biddle said, the process of approving travel or change of residence by enemy aliens. He pointed out that the far proclamation declaring certain nationals to be "enemy aliens" had been issued only with respect to Germans, Japanese and Italians and not against their satellites or countries overrun by the Axis.

Japanese Drive For East Indies

Sir Archibald P. Wavell, newly-appointed allied commander in chief in the Far East, would make his headquarters in Java, where the Indies capital, Batavia, is situated.

At the same time, Lieut.-Gov. H. J. Van Mook disclosed that the Dutch have long been preparing a "scorched earth" plan to prevent the Indies' oil fields and industries from falling into Japanese hands.

With a tiny but highly active fighting force, the Indies Dutch have already destroyed a total of two Japanese cruisers, two destroyers, nine transports, two merchant ships and 15 planes in the month-old Pacific conflict, it was officially announced.

In addition, two Japanese cruisers, two destroyers, four transports and nine planes have been damaged.

Imperial Tokyo headquarters—whose acknowledgment of losses, incidentally, has been meager—admitted today that another Japanese submarine has been sunk in the Pacific and a cruiser damaged in an attack by allied aircraft on January 4.

Bad For British

The Malayan situation continued bad for the British, and Tokyo said British air power in Malaya had been driven to refuge in Singapore, while that of the United States in the Philippines had become "meaningless militarily."

British admitted a further withdrawal of their forces in the eastern coast province of Pahang and "some penetration at one point" on the west coast.

But in Central China Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's hard-fighting Chinese troops reported they had slain 7,000 more Japanese in the muddy Changsha, Hunan Province, trap. Chinese also reported they had cut the Changsha-Hankow rail line running through Yochow, 100 miles northeast, in a raid on Japanese positions. Japanese were using the line to pull back their beaten forces which had slipped out of the trap, Chungking reported.

From the main northern anchor at Leningrad, the Russian line extends 280 miles southeast to Vysokoe, 45 miles west of Kalinin; thence through Staritsa in a sweeping arc menacing German-held Moshaisk, 57 miles west of Moscow, with Soviet troops striking from Volokolamsk, Narofominsk, Borovsk, Maloyaroslavl, Kaluga and Moezelsk. Moezelsk knives into German-held territory 140 miles southwest of Moscow.

From Moezelsk, the line runs southeast to Belev; then 150 miles southeast to Tim, 40 miles east of Kursk; thence 250 miles south along the Donets river to near Stalinog; and southeast 80 miles to Taganrog on the Sea of Azov.

The British radio said Russian troops had crossed the upper Donets—perhaps in the region of Kharkov, which lies 250 miles northeast of Taganrog.

Russians said the entire Kerch Peninsula, with Soviet troops striking from Feodosiya.

Recent visits of high Finnish leaders to Stockholm heightened belief that perhaps Finland was about to try for a separate peace with Russia. A Berlin dispatch to a Swedish newspaper said the Russians had recaptured Finnish-held Hogland island in the Gulf of Finland.

From Free French Brazzaville in the French Congo came a report of the fourth anti-German incident of recent days in German-occupied France. A German officer was said to have been killed and three others wounded by a crowd at Dijon, occupied France.

The British air ministry said a Sunday air raid on the Italian airbase at Castelnuovo, Sicily, was a highly destructive hammering of precious Axis air and fuel supplies awaiting flight to Axis forces in North Africa.

Workers Return

Greenport, N. Y., Jan. 7 (AP)—Thirty-five defense workers left their jobs yesterday to attend an N.L.R.B. hearing on charges that their company had engaged in unfair labor practices. What they actually heard was the trial examiner, Howard Myers, order them back to work. The group works for the Greenport Basin and Construction Co., which is building ships for the government. Myers said he understood that the men were needed at the plant and threatened to call police. When they failed to leave, Kenneth Monsell, head of the group, requested the men to return to the plant as a favor to him, and they left.

East Coast May Be Bombed by Planes, Zeppelins

feet, and the LZ-130 has a capacity of 7,000,000. The latter probably could better the Hindenburg's trans-Atlantic crossing time of 55 hours; for it cruises at 70 miles an hour and has a top speed of 85. Moreover, years of transatlantic dirigible operations have given the Nazis a corps of experienced zeppelin men.

If Germany decides a transatlantic dirigible raid is worth while, one defense official here said, the Nazis are not likely to be deterred by their lack of helium, the non-inflammable gas which only the United States produces in quantity.

He pointed out that even immediately after the Hindenburg disaster, German airship men showed complete willingness to continue flying in dirigibles filled with the explosively inflammable hydrogen. He also recalled that the zeppelins raided London in the World War relied on the more buoyant hydrogen, despite its dangers.

The hydrogen-filled zeppelin admittedly is vulnerable to air attack, and its ceiling of 15,000 to 18,000 feet no longer exceeds that of the fighter plane, as it did in the last war. However a zeppelin probably would have greater chance of evading Britain's sea and air blockade than would surface aircraft carriers.

The airship, moreover, would have little to fear from submarines and surface craft which menace surface carriers, and if weather conditions were appropriate, would be most difficult to locate as it hovered with silent motors near or over its American objective.

The United States' adamant refusal to give Germany helium put an apparent end to the Reich's pre-war commercial transatlantic airship operations, but the Swedish press carried a broad hint at the time of the Moscow-Berlin pact in 1939 that the dirigibles were ready for service. This was a story that Dr. Hugo Eckener, famed German dirigible builder, had been called to operate an airship cargo line between the Soviet and the Reich. It was never confirmed.

Recreations Primed for Clash With Glens Falls Tonight

Kingston Will Be At Full Strength In Important Game

Local State League Club Needs Victory to Keep Close to Albany; Game at 9:15 P. M.

It's basketball night in Kingston tonight. At 9:15 o'clock at the municipal auditorium the Glens Falls Lions make their second appearance here in an important New York State Pro Basketball League game with the vastly improved Kingston Recreations.

Everything pointing to the game promises one of the best this year. Glens Falls is lodged in last place but still only a few games out of first place. The Recs are in a tie for third with Troy and a triumph tonight would give the club undisputed possession of the berth and then only a meagre distance in back of Albany and Saratoga.

According to the advanced schedule of reserved seats for the attraction at the Broadway court an other good turnout of fans is looked for. Last week about 1,000 rabid rooters flocked to the court and saw the Recs humble Saratoga. Kingston fans saw plenty of action in that game.

In Albany Sunday "Tonight's the night if we expect to advance on the first place Albany team," a spokesman of the Recs said this morning when talking with a Freeman sports writer. "We're scheduled to play in Albany Sunday which will probably tell the story. A win tonight and another over the Senators would do us a lot of good."

That's the position the Recreations find themselves in. The first half is quickly coming to a close and every game from now on means much, especially to the teams out of first place. Kingston is still very much in striking distance of the Capital five.

Kingston may be without the services of Manager Jim McNally again tonight as the Rec outfit is working in a defense plant in his home town. However, McNally will try to be here for the game. If the manager is unable to attend, Jack McGuirk is expected to take charge of the team.

For Glens Falls, Manager Turk Karam's club is highlighted by Larry Dodick, a brilliant back-court ace who displayed his wares in the first game of the season at the auditorium. Jack McGuirk, former St. John's captain, "Red" Conaty and Irv Terjesen, ex-Metropolitan star, are the other members of the Glens Falls quintet.

With this array of talent ready, Glens Falls cannot be counted out too easily. All of these cagers are veterans in some degree and can give any team a whole of a battle any place and any time.

Back to the Kingston side of tonight's game finds the Recs in tip top shape. The probable lineup will find Hagen Anderson and Jack McGuirk at forwards, Big Al Benson, center, and Jerry Rizzo and Jim Buckley at guards. The recent addition of Anderson to the Recs' roster already has paid high dividends. Hagen was a big factor in last week's stirring triumph over Saratoga. Anderson also was in on the "kill" in that final quarter which gave game Kingston was a weak third period team.

In the preliminary game tonight the Joneses will face Elstons in an important City League game. Both teams are fighting it out for the championship. This game will go on at 8 o'clock.

Wilmington Five Leads American Basketball Round

There was no change in the standings of the clubs in the American Basketball League during the past week, with the result that the Wilmington Blue Bombers still hold a two-game advantage over Trenton, Washington and Philadelphia in the race for first-half honors.

Last week Philadelphia lost on the road at Wilmington and defeated Washington in an extra-period game at home. Trenton lost at Washington but defeated Wilmington at home.

Unless some inroads are made this week on the Wilmington position the chances of Trenton, Washington and Philadelphia may prove to be doubly difficult thereafter as the Wilmington Club will have but two remaining games prior to the termination of the first half of the season.

Applications have been presented to President John J. O'Brien by two cities in Maryland and Pennsylvania asking for inclusion in the second-half activities of the American Basketball League. These applications will be considered and acted upon on January 13.

First Bill Asks Theft of Tires Be Treated as Felony

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 7 (AP)—New York's legislature, convening today in an atmosphere predominant of war, was urged to limit effectiveness of all emergency legislation to a specific period.

A bill to define the period of war emergency was introduced by Senator Frederic R. Couderc and Assemblyman Abbott Low Moffat, New York city Republicans.

They proposed that any measure enacted as an "emergency" law be operative "until 30 days after ratification of a peace treaty with Japan or Germany, whichever is the later."

The legislature, by concurrent resolution, or the governor—if the legislature is not in session—could, by proclamation, terminate the emergency period however at an earlier date.

The first bill to go before the legislature, meantime, would make theft of an automobile tire or tube a felony, punishable by confinement in a state prison. No exact prison term was specified.

The measure is sponsored by Democratic Assembly Minority Leader Irwin Steingut of Brooklyn who, in view of tire and tube rationing for national defense, termed such a crime "the most contemptible theft."

Trappers' Co-operative Postpones Sale of Fur

The Empire State Trappers' Co-operative postponed the sale it was scheduled to hold in December until late in January, it was announced today. On Tuesday, January 20, at the Waldorf Hotel Annex in Phoenixia the group will hold a combined fall and winter sale.

Trappers from Delaware, Greene and Ulster counties will bring to this sale in Phoenixia Tuesday, January 20, around 3,000 skins.

The effect of the war on the fur market was the 30 per cent drop in most raw skin prices. The unusually warm fall weather and the increased tax rate on those income groups who buy coats that cost more than $200 were contributing causes for this market drop.

Mrs. Babcock, 80, Is Burned Badly; Clothes Catch Fire

Mrs. Bessie A. Babcock, 80, of 14 Belvedere street, was seriously burned about the face, head, hands and body, in the kitchen of her home this morning about 10 o'clock, and was removed to the Kingston Hospital in the Conner ambulance, where her condition this afternoon was reported as apparently fair.

From what could be learned, Mrs. Babcock was lighting some paper on the gas range in her kitchen when the paper suddenly flamed up and ignited her clothing.

Her screams were heard by Mrs. Louis J. Wood, who resides upstairs over the Babcock apartment, and Mrs. Wood ran down the stairs and into the kitchen. As she saw Mrs. Babcock's clothing in flames, Mrs. Wood picked up a rug on the floor and wrapped it about Mrs. Babcock to extinguish the flames.

Horticulturists to Convene In Kingston January 28-30 For 10th Annual Sessions

The program for the annual eastern meeting of the New York State Horticultural Society was received at the Farm Bureau office this morning and indicates the usual interesting and profitable series of talks and discussions on the growing and marketing of fruit.

The three days meeting, January 28, 29 and 30, will be held in Kingston for the 10th consecutive year. The first meeting here having been in January, 1933. The speaking programs will be given in the common council chamber at the city hall, while the municipal auditorium will be used for display of fruit and commercial exhibits. The municipal building on East O'Reilly street also will be available for exhibit of heavy machinery should it be found necessary.

The Governor Clinton Hotel, as in previous years, will be headquarters for the society, and the annual banquet will be held there on Thursday night, January 29. Edmund R. Bower, Ulster county 4-H agent, is chairman for this affair, which will feature a speaking contest between three speakers chosen by previous elimination contests in high schools and 4-H clubs.

Awards won in the boys competitive fruit exhibit and judging contests at the show also will be given at the banquet.

An innovation this year will be found in the announcement that the speaking sessions will be open to all farmers and the public generally. Heretofore these sessions were closed to all except those who wore buttons indicative of membership in the society. As in previous years the exhibits at the auditorium will be open to the public without admission charge.

The first session at the city hall will open at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning and will feature talks on the latest discoveries of control of insects and disease affecting fruit.

Wednesday afternoon Mayor Edelmuth is scheduled to make his first appearance before the society, welcoming the visitors to Kingston. The new president, who will be named at the annual meeting of the Horticultural Society in Rochester, January 13-16, will give his address Wednesday afternoon and Roy F. McPherson, secretary-treasurer of the society will give a general report.

DeWitt G. Crowell of Wallkill will be chairman of the half hour "Question Box" session at the opening of the Wednesday afternoon program at 1:30 o'clock.

Theodor Oxholm of Esopus, one of the vice presidents of the society, is to talk at 11 o'clock Friday morning on "A plan which has proved effective in promoting the sale of Ulster county apples."

Walter R. Clarke of Milton will be chairman of the Friday afternoon session, which will be devoted to special sprays.

A number of the experts from the Hudson Valley Laboratory in Poughkeepsie will be heard on the three days program and will tell about some of the experimental work they have carried on.

There will be an evening session at the Governor Clinton Hotel Wednesday evening with a talk on the problems of western fruit growers and a color movie on disease and insect control, the narration being by Lowell Thomas. Apple scab spores will be shown leaving the old leaves on the ground and establishing themselves on young foliage and codling moth eggs will be shown as they hatch out and later the larva will be shown entering the fruit, to produce the well known "wormy apple."

Lehman Insists On Lower Taxes

people of New York to hide the truth from them behind rhetoric—in simple terms it means that some of us are going to be put out of business and some of us are going to lose our jobs," he said.

"We are going to pay higher prices for food and clothing. Opportunities for education will be reduced, social progress slowed down and our privileges limited. It means that our government is going to dig deeper and deeper into our pockets to pay the cost of the war."

Warns Against Complacency

The executive warned against looking with "complacency and unconcern" to the soldiers who will be discharged after the war and forgetting "our obligation to the men and women who will be forced by caprice of our economy into unjust and unbearable idleness."

"We must now," he told the legislature, "give thought to fit them into our post war economy. We must seek to build up now a great post war reserve of public works and private works to help mitigate some of the inevitable unemployment which will ensue."

Expressing concern over what he termed the "apathetic attitude of the man in the street toward civilian protection efforts," the governor said such an attitude "is almost inexplicable." It is a case, he said, of the wish being father to the reaction.

"We, too, wish—and fervently pray," he declared, "that our people shall never have to endure the blazing hell of Plymouth and Coventry and of London. This optimistic tendency of a large proportion of people to regard this horror as an interesting but far-off spectacle is perhaps natural."

"But, if natural, it is utterly unreal and dangerous beyond exaggeration. Our sense of duty, as representatives of the people, would be dull indeed if we allowed even an hour's illusion of security to deflect us from our all-out effort of civilian protection."

Declaring that every man, woman and child is expected to obey instantly all instructions from official sources, the governor added:

"We would rather educate—but we shall legislate if necessary."

Frequent pre-session conferences of both Republican and Democratic leaders gave the lawmakers a headstart over their predecessors toward completing needed legislation.

Many Measures Drafted

Many proposed financial and defense measures already have been drafted as a result of the legislative meetings and others were expected to be introduced early in the session.

Party leaders and representatives of organized labor also gave final approval yesterday to a bill designed to lengthen working hours in defense industries without impairing the workers' interests.

The measure, intended to permit production of war materials on a 24-hour-a-day basis, requires manufacturers to obtain permission from the state industrial commissioner before the longer working hours can go into effect.

Meantime, some legislators reported strong opposition to a bill to permit state income taxpayers to deduct federal income tax payments in preparing their returns.

Opponents contended enactment of the measure would cause the loss of several millions of dollars in revenue and that it would prevent possible reduction or elimination of some other levy affecting more persons.

For the second time in modern legislative history the legislators begin the session with party organization complete and without necessity of selecting a presiding officer in the assembly.

The last time was in 1940 after assemblymen had served the first year of their two-year term lengthened from one year by the electorate in 1938. Until then the assembly had to organize every year and the senate, every second year.

Easterday Is Arrested

New York, Jan. 7 (AP)—William W. Easterday, who served a two-year penitentiary sentence for participation with Nicky Arnstein in a $900,000 securities swindle in 1920, was arrested at his home today on complaint of Paterson, N. J., police who said he was wanted there on a 16-count indictment charging issuance of fraudulent contracts.

New York, Jan. 7 (AP)—Stocks traced a mild retreat in today's market but losses were reduced generally after publication of President Roosevelt's budget message to Congress.

Revenue quarters appeared to have been well prepared for the revenue raising recommendations of the Chief Executive which were high-lighted by a call for $9,000,000,000 of new taxes in the next fiscal year.

Consideration of the federal financing program and the President's Tuesday outline of our war-building goal momentarily diverted Wall Street interest from the war bulletins which had a favorable tinge except as regards the situation in Malaya.

Declines predominated in the share list near the final hour though most issues were well above early lows which had represented declines of fractions to a point or more. Steels, motors and aircrafts continued in arrears while a few rails and industrial specialties registered modest gains. Transfers were at the rate of about 70,000 shares.

Bonds and commodities were mixed.
